Training engineering, end to end — the application in action, sector by sector

What this presentation covers

01

The lifecycle

Seven phases, 33 end-to-end processes, five gates

02

The dynamics, step by step

From the tenancy to the reports, on a large company

03

SMEs

Lighter tracks for smaller organizations

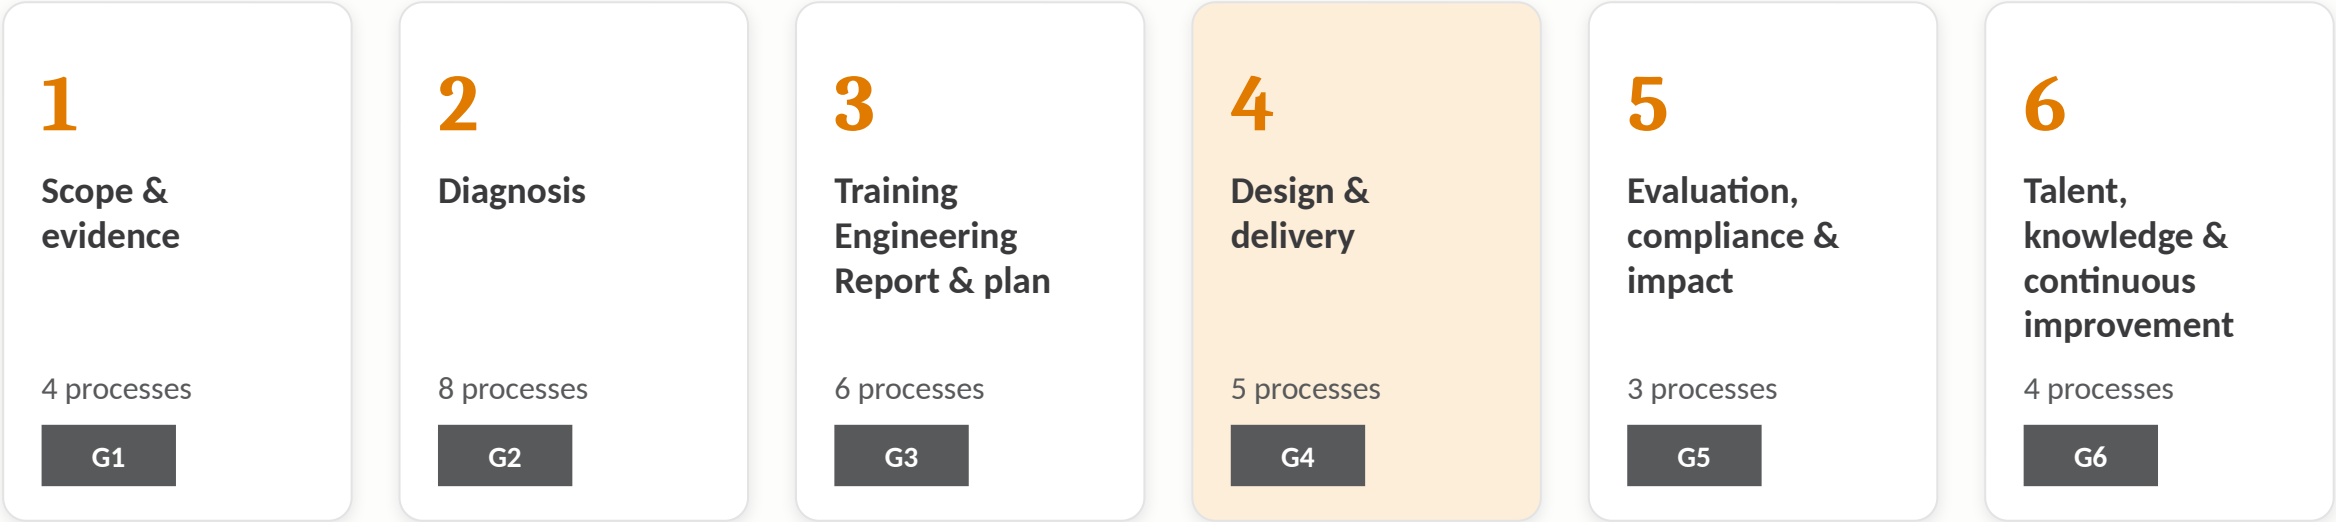

04

Sector by sector

29 sectors, each with its large company and its SME

One lifecycle, seven phases

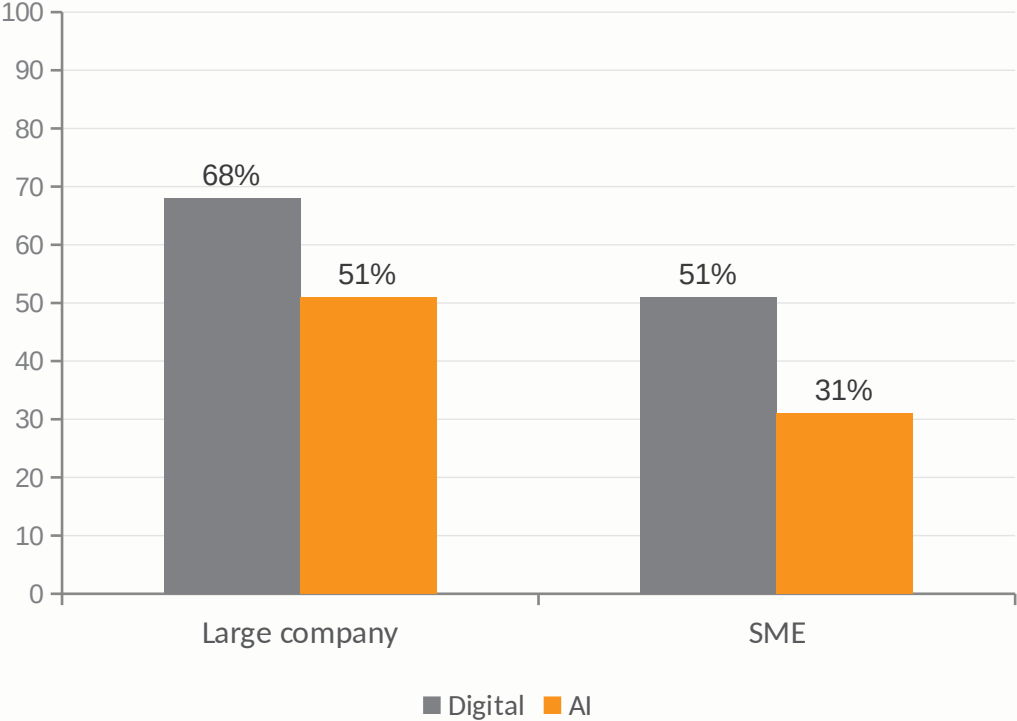

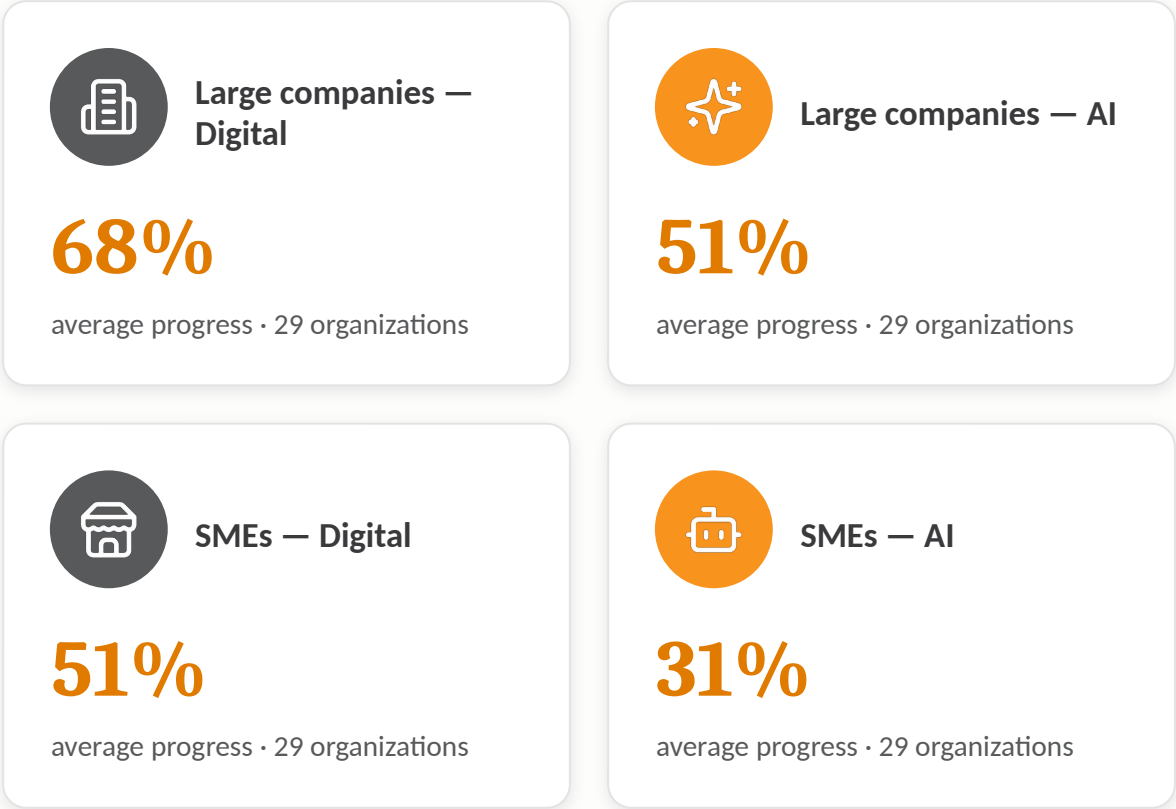

Each phase groups end-to-end processes; a gate closes each main phase.

Enablers run across all phases — E2E-15 · E2E-17 · E2E-18

Every organization runs two full cycles

Digital skills and AI skills, for large companies and SMEs, in 29 sectors.

Average task completion by segment and run, across the 29 sectors (%)

Independent organizations (Group: No)

Choose the Group (Yes or No), then the Organization.

Each organization is a closed tenant: its data is never visible to another.

Group members can read sister organizations; they cannot change them.

Seven phases, processes and gates on one screen

Progress per phase and per process, overdue tasks, complexity score.

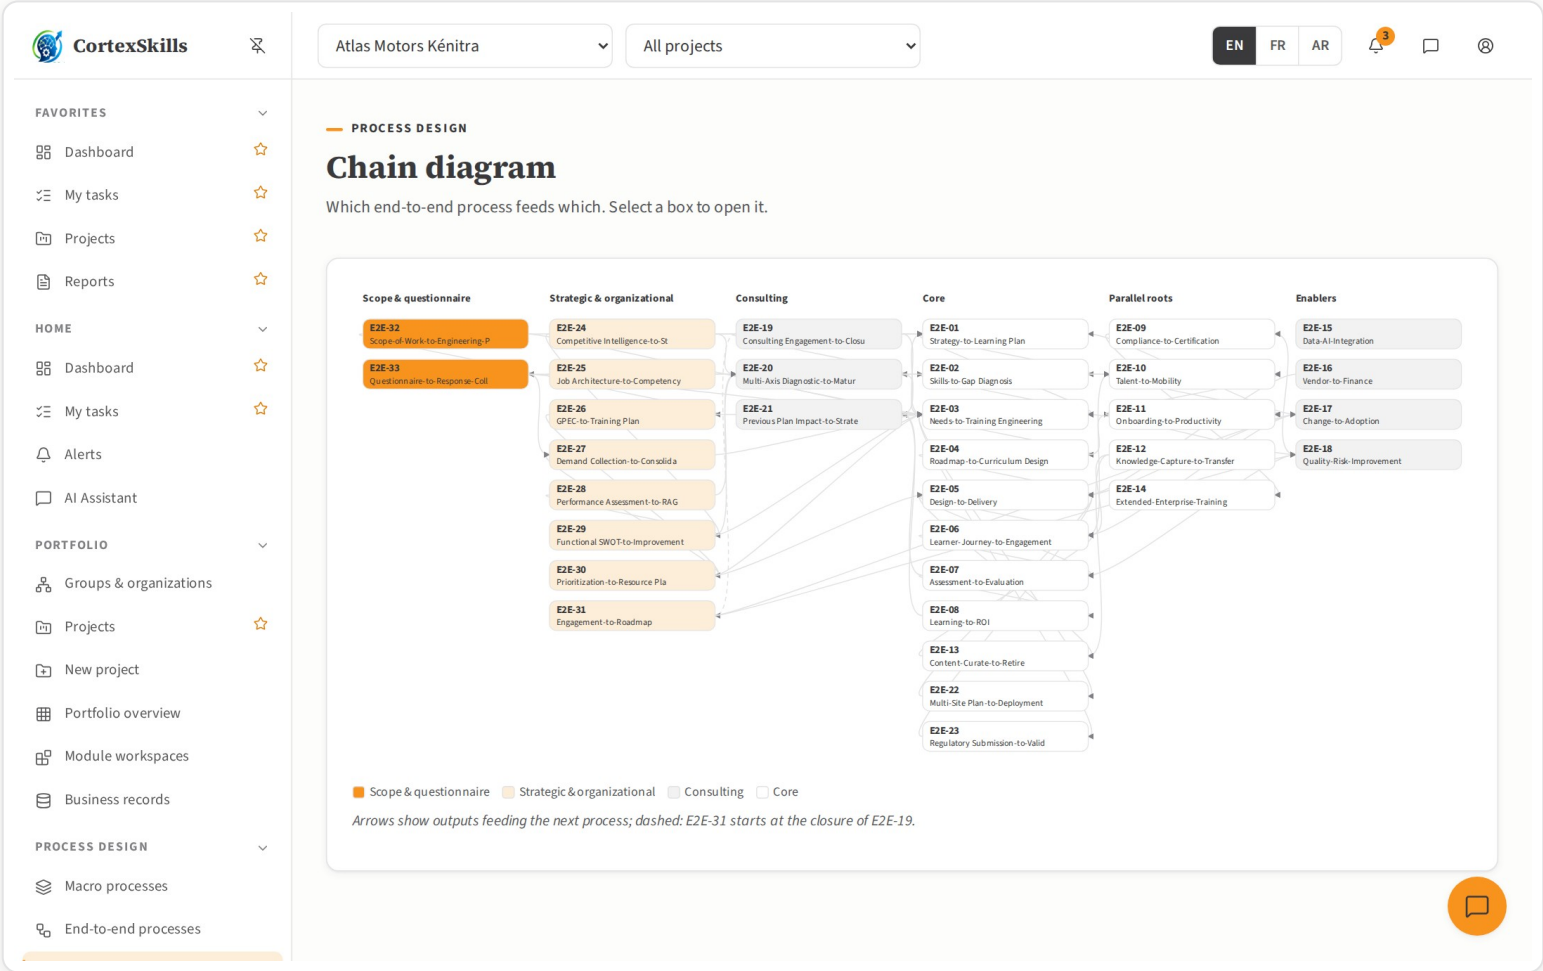

Enablers (data, change, quality) run across all phases.

A gate checklist must be complete before the next phase starts.

Processes feed each other

Each end-to-end process has a trigger, an end state and its inputs and outputs.

The chain shows which process consumes which output.

BPMN diagrams can be viewed, edited, imported and exported.

SMEs: lighter tracks

Example: Clinique Al Amal, healthcare provider

Three SME tracks, sized by complexity

The complexity score recommends the track; a different choice needs a justification.

T1 · Essential

Score 0-29

Fewer gates, short checklists, about 6 weeks

T2 · Standard

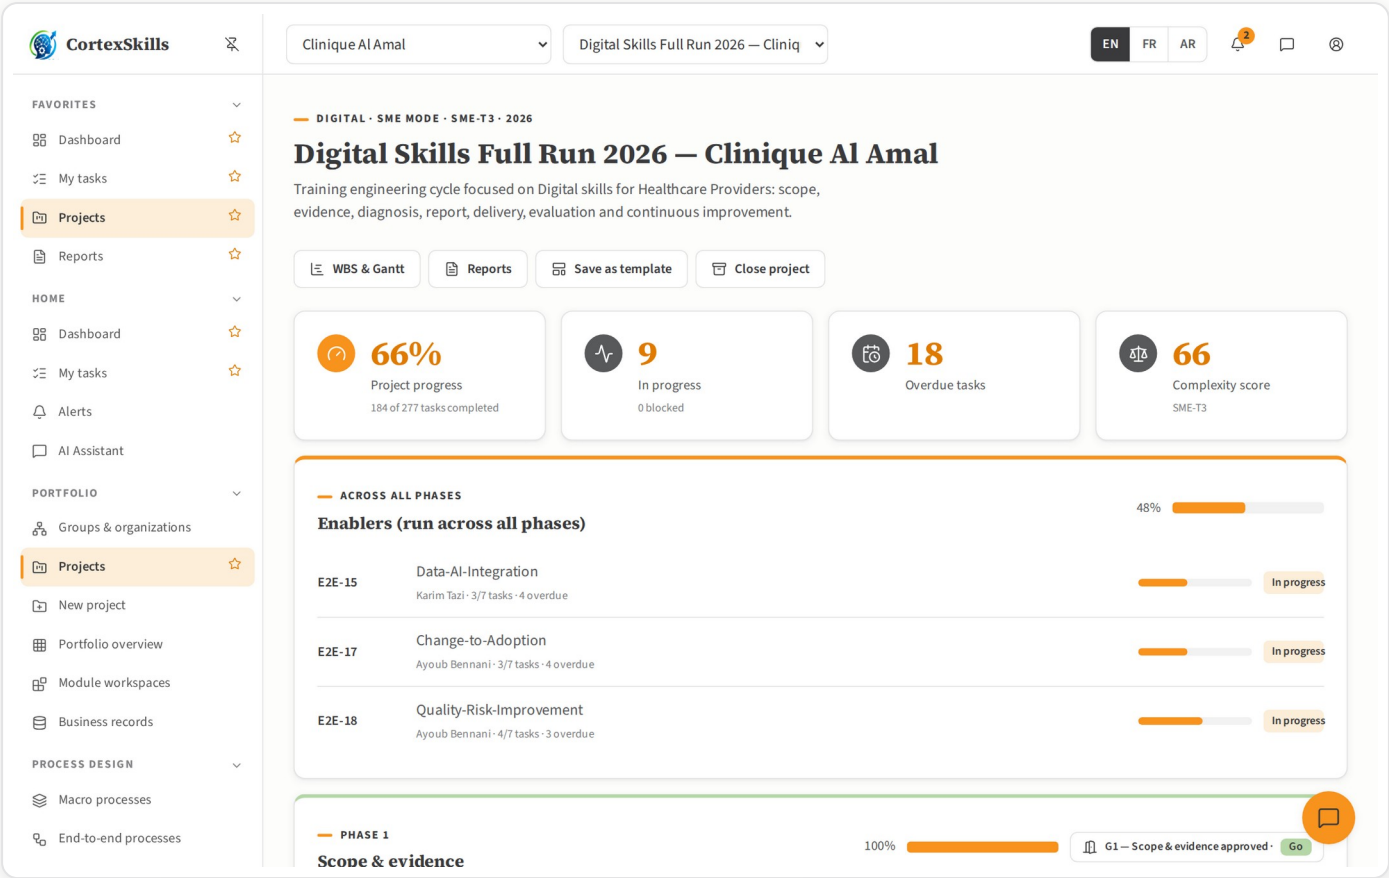

Score 30-49

Core processes with three gates

T3 · Extended

Score 50-69

Close to Full mode, lighter documentation

Same guidance, on any screen

Healthcare SME: the task panel in French, the workspace in Arabic on a phone.
